1 Arbitration Agreements

1.1 What, if any, are the legal requirements of an arbitration agreement under the laws of your jurisdiction?

An arbitration agreement must specify a clearly defined legal relationship between the parties and include a sufficiently unambiguous reference to arbitration. Although such agreements are typically in written form, there is no such legal requirement, and they may therefore be concluded orally or by the parties' conduct.

1.2 What other elements ought to be incorporated in an arbitration agreement?

It is advisable to determine the language of the proceedings, the substantive law governing the dispute, and the seat of arbitration. It is important to note that a confidentiality clause is essential to ensure that the parties are obligated to keep the proceedings confidential.

Usually, parties refer to the rules of an arbitration institute, for example, the SCC Arbitration Institute ("SCC") or ICC Arbitration. The SCC is the most used and internationally recognised arbitration institute in Sweden. Normally, parties refer to either the SCC's ordinary Arbitration Rules (the "SCC Rules") or the SCC's Expedited Arbitration Rules.

1.3 What has been the approach of the national courts to the enforcement of arbitration agreements?

A valid arbitration agreement bars court proceedings. In recognition of the parties' contractual freedom, the court will uphold an arbitration agreement unless it affords one of the parties an unfair procedural advantage (in which case the clause could be adjusted or declared invalid in part) or is found contractually invalid, for example, if it was induced by duress or fraud.

2 Governing Legislation

2.1 What legislation governs the enforcement of arbitration proceedings in your jurisdiction?

Arbitration proceedings are governed by the Swedish Arbitration Act (the "Arbitration Act"), most recently amended in 2018.

2.2 Does the same arbitration law govern both domestic and international arbitration proceedings? If not, how do they differ?

The Arbitration Act applies to both domestic as well as international arbitration proceedings, provided the seat of the arbitration is in Sweden.

2.3 Is the law governing international arbitration based on the UNCITRAL Model Law? Are there significant differences between the two?

During the enactment process of the Arbitration Act, the UNCITRAL Model Law had a significant influence on the design of the law. There are no significant differences.

2.4 To what extent are there mandatory rules governing international arbitration proceedings sited in your jurisdiction?

The Arbitration Act is predicated upon party autonomy and contains few mandatory rules. The limitations upon party autonomy are typically defined by rules of due process. Consequently, the parties shall be treated equally and afforded sufficient opportunity to present their case.

3 Jurisdiction

3.1 Are there any subject matters that may not be referred to arbitration under the governing law of your jurisdiction? What is the general approach used in determining whether or not a dispute is "arbitrable"?

All matters that the parties can settle in dispute are arbitrable. The applicable substantive law determines whether this requirement is met. Matters such as patent validity, taxation disputes, bankruptcy declaration, family law and criminal law are non-arbitrable. In principle, all commercial disputes can be resolved through arbitration.

3.2 Is an arbitral tribunal permitted to rule on the question of its own jurisdiction?

Yes, the arbitral tribunal is authorised to rule on its own jurisdiction.

3.3 What is the approach of the national courts in your jurisdiction towards a party who commences court proceedings in apparent breach of an arbitration agreement?

The court does not generally inquire into whether an arbitration agreement exists between the parties that may bar court proceedings. Further, even if the court is aware that such an agreement exists, it will not ex officio dismiss a claim on that basis. To avoid the jurisdiction of a national court, a defendant must invoke the arbitration agreement in its first response to the statement of claim.

3.4 Under what circumstances can a national court address the issue of the jurisdiction and competence of an arbitral tribunal? What is the standard of review in respect of a tribunal's decision as to its own jurisdiction?

A party may request a national court to determine the arbitral tribunal's authority to resolve the dispute. The arbitral tribunal may continue its proceedings pending the court's decision.

A decision by which the arbitral tribunal affirms its jurisdiction may be challenged by a party before the appropriate court of appeal. This challenge must be brought within 30 days from the date on which the party received the decision.

An award that dismisses the case on lack of jurisdiction may be appealed to the appropriate court of appeal within two months of receiving the decision.

3.5 Under what, if any, circumstances does the national law of your jurisdiction allow an arbitral tribunal to assume jurisdiction over individuals or entities which are not themselves party to an agreement to arbitrate?

An arbitration agreement is only binding on the parties to the agreement. However, in some circumstances, an arbitration agreement may also become binding upon third parties, including many cases of assignment, succession, or guarantees provided by third parties.

3.6 What laws or rules prescribe limitation periods for the commencement of arbitrations in your jurisdiction and what is the typical length of such periods? Do the national courts of your jurisdiction consider such rules procedural or substantive, i.e., what choice of law rules govern the application of limitation periods?

There are no statutory limitations for the commencement of arbitrations under the Arbitration Act. Limitation of claims is an aspect of Swedish substantive law. The Swedish Limitations Act provides a general 10-year limitation period on all claims. For certain claims, there are shorter periods.

3.7 What is the effect in your jurisdiction of pending insolvency proceedings affecting one or more of the parties to ongoing arbitration proceedings?

Bankruptcy can significantly impact arbitration proceedings in various ways. The specific consequences often depend on which party has been declared bankrupt. The bankruptcy estate, through the bankruptcy trustee, is entitled to intervene in the arbitration proceedings to protect its interests. If the estate opts not to do so, the disputed property is excluded from the bankruptcy estate.

A company reconstruction procedure does not alter arbitration proceedings.

4 Choice of Law Rules

4.1 How is the law applicable to the substance of a dispute determined?

According to the Arbitration Act, the arbitral tribunal shall apply the law or set of rules agreed upon by the parties. If the parties have not agreed, the applicable substantive law will be determined by the arbitral tribunal. In a Swedish context, the arbitral tribunal will normally either apply the conflict rules of Swedish international private law (which includes EU rules) or identify the legal system most closely connected to the contract.

4.2 In what circumstances will mandatory laws (of the seat or of another jurisdiction) prevail over the law chosen by the parties?

Due to the significant degree of party autonomy, arbitrators will be strongly disinclined to disregard the law chosen by the parties. In exceptional cases, however, Swedish mandatory rules may prevail over the law chosen by the parties if the latter includes provisions that are clearly in conflict with public policy (ordre public).

4.3 What choice of law rules govern the formation, validity, and legality of arbitration agreements?

The arbitration agreement is deemed to constitute a separate agreement from the main agreement in this respect. If the contract includes a choice-of-law provision, Swedish law presumes that it applies solely to the main agreement (see question 4.1) unless the parties have clearly indicated that the choice applies also to the arbitration agreement. If no explicit choice of law has been made, the arbitration agreement will be governed by the law of the seat. Therefore, an arbitration agreement seated in Sweden is typically governed by Swedish law.

5 Selection of Arbitral Tribunal

5.1 Are there any limits to the parties' autonomy to select arbitrators?

Due to its strong emphasis on party autonomy, the Arbitration Act has only limited restrictions on arbitrator selection. However, if the arbitrator selection process affords a party an undue advantage, the arbitration award may be set aside if properly challenged. This would be the case, for example, if the arbitration agreement permits one party to appoint all arbitrators. (See also question 5.4.)

5.2 If the parties' chosen method for selecting arbitrators fails, is there a default procedure?

The Arbitration Act provides that the arbitral tribunal shall normally consist of three arbitrators. Unless the parties agree otherwise, each party appoints one arbitrator, and the party-appointed arbitrators select the chair. If the selection procedure fails (for example, if a party fails to make a timely appointment), the other party can request that a court appoint that arbitrator.

5.3 Can a court intervene in the selection of arbitrators? If so, how?

A court does not of its own initiative intervene in the selection of arbitrators. However, as stated in question 5.2, a court may, at the request of a party, assist in the selection of arbitrators, particularly if a party obstructs the procedure.

5.4 What are the requirements (if any) imposed by law or issued by arbitration institutions within your jurisdiction as to arbitrator independence, neutrality and/or impartiality and for disclosure of potential conflicts of interest for arbitrators?

According to the Arbitration Act and the SCC Rules, an arbitrator must be independent, impartial and have full legal capacity. A potential candidate must immediately disclose any circumstances that might render him or her incapable of serving as arbitrator, such as lack of impartiality or independence. Should any such circumstances arise subsequently, they must be disclosed promptly.

6 Procedural Rules

6.1 Are there laws or rules governing the procedure of arbitration in your jurisdiction? If so, do those laws or rules apply to all arbitral proceedings sited in your jurisdiction?

The procedural rules set out in the Arbitration Act apply to both domestic and international arbitrations. Except for certain general provisions designed to protect the fundamental interests of the parties, these rules are not mandatory. In accordance with the principle of party autonomy, the arbitral procedure is primarily determined by the agreement of the parties.

6.2 In arbitration proceedings conducted in your jurisdiction, are there any particular procedural steps that are required by law?

Very few of the procedural rules set out in the Arbitration Act are mandatory. However, arbitrators are required to ensure that each party is given an opportunity to present its case, whether in writing or orally. If a party so requests, and unless the parties have agreed otherwise, an oral hearing must be held. Each party must also be afforded the opportunity to review all materials relating to the dispute that have been submitted to the arbitrators.

6.3 Are there any particular rules that govern the conduct of counsel from your jurisdiction in arbitral proceedings sited in your jurisdiction? If so: (i) do those same rules also govern the conduct of counsel from your jurisdiction in arbitral proceedings sited elsewhere; and (ii) do those same rules also govern the conduct of counsel from countries other than your jurisdiction in arbitral proceedings sited in your jurisdiction?

The conduct of counsel in arbitral proceedings is not specifically regulated by Swedish law. However, counsel may be subject to their respective professional codes of conduct. Members of the Swedish Bar Association are required to adhere to the Association's Code of Conduct, regardless of the location of the arbitral proceedings.

6.4 What powers and duties does the national law of your jurisdiction impose upon arbitrators?

The Arbitration Act empowers arbitrators to rule on their own jurisdiction to resolve the dispute, determine the seat of arbitration, and decide the applicable substantive law if the parties have not agreed upon it. Arbitrators are also authorised to decide on the admissibility of evidence, appoint experts (unless both parties object), order the production of documents, and grant interim measures.

The overarching duty of arbitrators is to conduct the arbitration impartially, efficiently, and expeditiously, and to act in accordance with the parties' agreements unless prevented from doing so.

6.5 Are there rules restricting the appearance of lawyers from other jurisdictions in legal matters in your jurisdiction and, if so, is it clear that such restrictions do not apply to arbitration proceedings sited in your jurisdiction?

Swedish procedural law restricts the appearance of attorneys from jurisdictions outside the EEA and Switzerland in court proceedings. No such restriction applies to arbitration proceedings.

6.6 To what extent are there laws or rules in your jurisdiction providing for arbitrator immunity?

There is no legislation in Sweden providing for arbitrator immunity. Under the SCC Rules, arbitrators may be liable for damages if caused through gross negligence or intent.

6.7 Do the national courts have jurisdiction to deal with procedural issues arising during an arbitration?

The Swedish courts may not intervene in arbitral proceedings unless requested to do so by a party. The courts' jurisdiction is strictly limited to procedural matters expressly set out in the Arbitration Act. These include the appointment and removal of arbitrators in certain circumstances, the granting of interim measures, orders for the production of documents, the examination of witnesses under oath, and the review of the arbitral tribunal's decisions on jurisdiction.

7 Preliminary Relief and Interim Measures

7.1 Is an arbitral tribunal in your jurisdiction permitted to award preliminary or interim relief? If so, what types of relief? Must an arbitral tribunal seek the assistance of a court to do so?

At the request of a party, an arbitral tribunal may award interim relief. Such relief may include prohibitive measures restraining a party from taking certain action, positive measures requiring a party to take certain action, and measures aimed at ensuring the future enforcement of the award. In essence, the Arbitration Act empowers arbitral tribunals to grant interim measures equivalent to those available under the UNCITRAL Model Law. The arbitral tribunal may also require the requesting party to provide reasonable security for any damage that may arise as a result of the interim measure.

An arbitral tribunal is not required to seek the assistance of a court when deciding on interim measures. However, interim decisions issued by an arbitral tribunal are not enforceable in Sweden. Consequently, if a party fails to comply with the arbitral tribunal's decision, the opposing party may need to apply to a court for the same measures in order to obtain effective enforcement.

7.2 Is a court entitled to grant preliminary or interim relief in proceedings subject to arbitration? In what circumstances? Can a party's request to a court for relief have any effect on the jurisdiction of the arbitration tribunal?

The Arbitration Act permits a court to grant interim relief in arbitration proceedings where the requesting party demonstrates probable cause for its claim, establishes a risk that its rights may be frustrated if the relief is not granted, and shows that the requested measure is proportionate. A party's request to a court for relief does not affect the jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal.

7.3 In practice, what is the approach of the national courts to requests for interim relief by parties to arbitration agreements?

The existence of an arbitration agreement does not affect the approach of national courts to requests for interim relief. The nature of the interim measures that may be granted will depend on what is necessary to protect the applicant's interests. In exceptional circumstances, interim relief may be granted ex parte.

7.4 Under what circumstances will a national court of your jurisdiction issue an anti-suit injunction in aid of an arbitration?

Anti-suit injunctions do not exist under Swedish law.

7.5 Does the law of your jurisdiction allow for the national court and/or arbitral tribunal to order security for costs?

The arbitral tribunal may request that the parties provide security for the arbitral tribunal's own fees and expenses. Apart from this, Swedish law does not empower courts or arbitral tribunals to order security for costs. However, under the SCC Rules, the arbitral tribunal may, in exceptional circumstances, order a claimant or counterclaimant to provide security for the other party's costs.

7.6 What is the approach of national courts to the enforcement of preliminary relief and interim measures ordered by arbitral tribunals in your jurisdiction and in other jurisdictions?

An arbitral tribunal's interim measures are not enforceable in Sweden.

8 Evidentiary Matters

8.1 What rules of evidence (if any) apply to arbitral proceedings in your jurisdiction?

The parties are subject to very few evidentiary restrictions under Swedish law. The parties are responsible for presenting their evidence. The Arbitration Act provides that an arbitral tribunal may appoint experts unless both parties oppose this, but arbitrators will very rarely undertake any fact finding of their own initiative. The arbitral tribunal may refuse to admit evidence if it is manifestly irrelevant to the dispute, or if such refusal is justified considering the time at which the evidence is presented.

The rules of evidence applicable in the proceedings are primarily determined by the parties' agreement. The International Bar Association ("IBA") Rules on the Taking of Evidence in International Commercial Arbitration frequently serve as a guideline for arbitral tribunals in international proceedings, reflecting best practice in international arbitration.

8.2 What powers does an arbitral tribunal have to order disclosure/discovery and to require the attendance of witnesses?

At the request of a party, an arbitral tribunal may order that the other party disclose a document or an object, or order a witness or an expert to attend a hearing. Unlike measures ordered by the courts (see question 8.3), such orders issued by an arbitral tribunal are not enforceable in Sweden and cannot be directly sanctioned. However, if a party refuses to comply with such an order, the arbitral tribunal may be entitled to draw adverse inferences from that party's non-compliance.

8.3 Under what circumstances, if any, can a national court assist arbitral proceedings by ordering disclosure/discovery or requiring the attendance of witnesses?

With the consent of the arbitral tribunal, a party may request that a district court order the opposing party or a third party to disclose a document or an object, or request that a witness or an expert be examined under oath before a district court. The measures ordered by the court are enforceable and may be subject to various sanctions in the event of non-compliance. The arbitral tribunal shall approve such requests if it finds that the measures are justified, with regard to the evidence in the case. If approved by the arbitral tribunal, the district court shall grant the request unless it is unlawful.

8.4 What, if any, laws, regulations or professional rules apply to the production of written and/or oral witness testimony? For example, must witnesses be sworn in before the tribunal and is cross-examination allowed?

Swedish law does not prescribe a specific form for witness testimony in arbitration proceedings. However, the parties often agree upon the use of written witness statements. If a party wishes to rely on such a statement, it must ensure that the witness is available for cross-examination at the hearing, should the opposing party so request.

Arbitrators in Sweden do not have the authority to administer legally binding oaths, nor do they possess any means of compelling a witness to attend a hearing. However, a party may apply to have a witness examined under oath before a district court (see question 8.3). Swedish procedural law applies to such examinations, and cross-examination is always allowed.

8.5 What is the scope of the privilege rules under the law of your jurisdiction? For example, do all communications with outside counsel and/or in-house counsel attract privilege? In what circumstances is privilege deemed to have been waived?

Swedish law does not regulate privilege in arbitration but, as noted in question 8.1, the IBA Rules may serve as guideline for the arbitral tribunal. In court proceedings, privilege applies to counsel who are members of the Swedish Bar Association. In-house counsel cannot be members of the Bar Association and, consequently, do not fall within the scope of privilege.

9 Making an Award

9.1 What, if any, are the legal requirements of an arbitral award? For example, is there any requirement under the law of your jurisdiction that the award contains reasons or that the arbitrators sign every page?

According to the Arbitration Act, an award shall be made in writing and state the place of arbitration and the date on which the award is made. It suffices that the award is signed by a majority of the arbitrators, provided that the reason why all of the arbitrators have not signed the award is noted. The arbitrators are not required to sign every page of the award. There is no formal requirement for the award to include reasons.

9.2 What powers (if any) do arbitral tribunals have to clarify, correct or amend an arbitral award?

The arbitral tribunal may correct or supplement an award if it contains an obvious inaccuracy because of a typographical, computational or other similar mistake, or if the arbitral tribunal by oversight has failed to decide an issue that should have been decided. Upon request by a party within 30 days of receipt of the award, the arbitral tribunal may also correct or supplement an award or interpret a decision therein.

10 Challenge of an Award

10.1 On what bases, if any, are parties entitled to challenge an arbitral award made in your jurisdiction?

The Arbitration Act makes a distinction between an action to declare an arbitral award invalid ab initio, and an action to set aside an award.

An award is invalid if: (1) the award includes determination of an issue that is non-arbitrable under Swedish law; (2) the award, or the manner in which it was made, is clearly incompatible with Swedish public policy; or (3) the award is not in writing or has not been signed in the required manner.

At the request of a party, an award shall be wholly or partially set aside if: (1) the award is not covered by a valid arbitration agreement between the parties; (2) the arbitrators have rendered the award after the expiry of an agreed time limit set by the parties, or the arbitrators have otherwise exceeded their mandate; (3) the arbitral proceedings should not have been conducted in Sweden; (4) an arbitrator has been appointed contrary to the agreement between the parties or the Arbitration Act; (5) an arbitrator has been unauthorised due to lack of capacity or impartiality; or (6) there has otherwise occurred an irregularity in the course of proceedings that is likely to have affected the outcome.

10.2 Can parties agree to exclude any basis of challenge against an arbitral award that would otherwise apply as a matter of law?

If none of the parties is domiciled or has its place of business in Sweden and the matter concerns a commercial relationship, the parties may, through an express written agreement, exclude or limit the application of the grounds for setting aside an award. It is not possible to waive the right to challenge an award that is invalid under the Arbitration Act (see question 10.1).

10.3 Can parties agree to expand the scope of appeal of an arbitral award beyond the grounds available in relevant national laws?

Swedish law does not recognise any grounds for the appeal of an arbitral award on the merits. However, the parties may agree on a right to appeal the award to a secondary arbitration tribunal.

10.4 What is the procedure for appealing an arbitral award in your jurisdiction?

Swedish law does not recognise any grounds for the appeal of an arbitral award on the merits. However, the parties may agree on a right to appeal the award to a secondary arbitration tribunal.

11 Enforcement of an Award

11.1 Has your jurisdiction signed and/or ratified the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards? Has it entered any reservations? What is the relevant national legislation?

Sweden has signed and ratified the New York Convention without reservations. There is no national legislation specifically related to the Convention, but there are legal provisions on the recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards in the Arbitration Act and the Swedish Enforcement Code.

11.2 Has your jurisdiction signed and/or ratified any regional Conventions concerning the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards?

Sweden has not signed any such conventions.

11.3 What is the approach of the national courts in your jurisdiction towards the recognition and enforcement of arbitration awards in practice? What steps are parties required to take?

Swedish arbitral awards are recognised and enforceable in the same way as judgments by the national courts, meaning that an application for enforcement of an arbitral award should be filed directly with the Swedish Enforcement Authority (Kronofogdemyndigheten). As a main rule, foreign arbitral awards are also recognised and enforceable, but enforcement of foreign awards involves two steps. First, an application for enforcement shall be filed with the Svea Court of Appeal, which shall determine whether the award is in line with Swedish public policy. Additionally, the respondent can make certain objections against enforcement. Second, if the Court grants the application, the party seeking enforcement shall file an application for enforcement with the Swedish Enforcement Authority.

11.4 What is the effect of an arbitration award in terms of res judicata in your jurisdiction? Does the fact that certain issues have been finally determined by an arbitral tribunal preclude those issues from being re-heard in a national court and, if so, in what circumstances?

Arbitral awards have res judicata effects in the same way as judgments by the national courts, meaning that an issue determined by an arbitral tribunal cannot, as a main rule, be re-tried in subsequent proceedings. However, determining the scope of res judicata effects may be very complicated, and there is a significant body of Swedish case law related to this question.

11.5 What is the standard for refusing enforcement of an arbitral award on the grounds of public policy?

Enforcement of a foreign arbitral award may be refused if the award is in breach of fundamental principles of Swedish law or if the arbitrators have decided issues that may not be tried by arbitrators. Such grounds for refusing enforcement are applied restrictively.

12 Confidentiality

12.1 Are arbitral proceedings siting in your jurisdiction confidential? In what circumstances, if any, are proceedings not protected by confidentiality? What, if any, law governs confidentiality?

Arbitral proceedings in Sweden are private, meaning that the Swedish principle of public access to information does not apply. Moreover, the arbitral tribunal is considered to have a duty of confidentiality towards the parties. However, as noted in question 1.2, a confidentiality clause is required for the parties to be bound by confidentiality.

12.2 Can information disclosed in arbitral proceedings be referred to and/or relied on in subsequent proceedings?

Yes, unless the parties have agreed otherwise.

13 Remedies / Interests / Costs

13.1 Are there limits on the types of remedies (including damages) that are available in arbitration (e.g., punitive damages)?

While the Arbitration Act does not explicitly mention any such limits, enforcement of a foreign arbitral award may be refused if it conflicts with Swedish public policy. It is uncertain what types of remedies, if any, might be considered to conflict with Swedish public policy.

13.2 What, if any, interest is available, and how is the rate of interest determined?

Interest is determined in accordance with the parties' agreement or the applicable substantive law. Under Swedish law, interest is determined in accordance with the Swedish Interest Act.

13.3 Are parties entitled to recover fees and/or costs and, if so, on what basis? What is the general practice with regard to shifting fees and costs between the parties?

The Arbitration Act provides the arbitral tribunal with a mandate to order a party to reimburse the counterparty's legal fees and to allocate the arbitration costs between the parties. There is a strong loser pays-principle under Swedish law, but the arbitral tribunal should nevertheless always consider the reasonableness of a cost claim. The parties may agree on other principles for cost allocation.

13.4 Is an award subject to tax? If so, in what circumstances and on what basis?

Arbitral awards are not subject to tax per se, but depending on the subject matter of the dispute, payments made or received in accordance with an arbitral award may be subject to tax implications, including, but not limited to, income tax or VAT.

13.5 Are there any restrictions on third parties, including lawyers, funding claims under the law of your jurisdiction? Are contingency fees legal under the law of your jurisdiction? Are there any "professional" funders active in the market, either for litigation or arbitration?

There are no such general restrictions. However, according to the Code of Conduct of the Swedish Bar Association, its members are not permitted to fund their clients' claims, and the use of contingency fee agreements is restricted. There are a few professional third-party funders of litigation and arbitration active in the Swedish market.

14 Investor-State Arbitrations

14.1 Has your jurisdiction signed and ratified the Washington Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes Between States and Nationals of Other States (1965) (otherwise known as "ICSID")?

Yes, Sweden is a party to ICSID.

14.2 How many Bilateral Investment Treaties ("BITs") or other multi-party investment treaties (such as the Energy Charter Treaty) is your jurisdiction party to?

There are BITs in force between Sweden and 53 other countries.

Sweden is also a party to the Energy Charter Treaty, as well as other multi-party investment treaties.

14.3 Does your jurisdiction have any noteworthy language that it uses in its investment treaties (for example, in relation to “most favoured nation” or exhaustion of local remedies provisions)? If so, what is the intended significance of that language?

Sweden’s investment treaty model is based on the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (“OECD”) model agreement.

14.4 What is the approach of the national courts in your jurisdiction towards the defence of state immunity regarding jurisdiction and execution?

Sweden has adopted a restrictive approach to state immunity and has ratified the UN Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Properties (which, however, has not yet come into force). In a 2011 case regarding state immunity, the Swedish Supreme Court noted that a state’s immunity from suit only extends to sovereign acts and not to commercial acts. As regards immunity from execution, the Supreme Court referred to the Immunities Convention (and Sweden’s ratification thereof) and concluded that enforcement may be granted at least in relation to property used for purposes other than governmental non-commercial purposes.

15 General

15.1 Are there noteworthy trends or current issues affecting the use of arbitration in your jurisdiction (such as pending or proposed legislation)? Are there any trends regarding the types of dispute commonly being referred to arbitration?

Arbitration is already the dominant form of resolution of large commercial disputes in Sweden. However, the workload of the Swedish courts has risen significantly over the last few years due to an increased political focus on crime repression. Since the Swedish courts deal with both criminal matters and civil matters (such as commercial disputes), and since the former are prioritised, it often takes several years to have commercial disputes adjudicated by the courts. Over time, this trend will likely make arbitration an even more attractive option for dispute resolution.

Another trend is that third-party funding is on the rise in Swedish arbitration.

15.2 What, if any, recent steps have institutions in your jurisdiction taken to address current issues in arbitration (such as time and costs)?

To make its arbitrations faster and more cost-efficient, the SCC introduced rules in 2017 that enable the arbitral tribunal to consider each party’s contribution to the efficiency and expeditiousness of the arbitration when allocating arbitration costs and legal fees between the parties. At the same time, the SCC introduced a provision that authorised the arbitral tribunal to order claimants and counterclaimants to provide security for costs in exceptional cases (such as cases with frivolous claims). Moreover, the SCC’s schedules of costs for the arbitrators’ fees tend to reduce the costs of SCC proceedings compared to many other types of arbitration.

According to 2024 statistics, the final award was rendered within 12 months (from the referral to the arbitral tribunal) in almost two thirds of the cases tried under the SCC Rules. In SCC Expedited Arbitrations, the final award was rendered within six months in 92 per cent of cases.

Accordingly, SCC arbitration tends to be an efficient form of dispute resolution from a time and cost perspective.

In 2021, the SCC launched the SCC Express Rules, under which parties can apply for the appointment of a neutral legal expert who shall opine on the merits of the case within three weeks. Unless agreed otherwise, the findings of the legal expert are not contractually binding and not enforceable. The cost for SCC Express is fixed at EUR 29,000. The first case was administered in 2023.

15.3 What is the approach of the national courts in your jurisdiction towards the conduct of remote or virtual arbitration hearings as an effective substitute to in-person arbitration hearings? How (if at all) has that approach evolved since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic?

According to the Arbitration Act, an oral hearing shall be held upon request of a party. In a 2022 decision, the Svea Court of Appeal concluded that the arbitral tribunal has a mandate to decide that participation should be remote unless the parties have agreed otherwise.

The use of completely virtual hearings increased dramatically during the pandemic. It has decreased since then but may still be more common than before the pandemic. Currently, most parties, counsel and arbitrators seem to prefer to conduct final hearings in person, when possible. However, remote witness examinations are still more common than before the pandemic and we expect them to remain so. Case management conferences are usually held virtually.

Albin Larsson is Specialist Counsel and head of the dispute resolution practice at Setterwalls' office in Malmö. He is specialised in commercial dispute resolution, and his primary work consists of acting as counsel in commercial court disputes as well as domestic and international arbitrations. In addition to being a skilled litigator, Albin's experience spans many industries and areas of law. Albin received his LL.M. from Lund University in 2012. Before joining Setterwalls in 2019, he spent seven years in the Swedish judiciary, including service as a junior judge at a district court and as an associate judge at a court of appeal. Like his co-authors, Albin meets all formal qualifications required for appointment as a judge in the Swedish courts. However, he has found that his skills are best used helping clients avoid or solve disputes. Albin is a member of the Swedish Bar Association. Outside of work, Albin has a great interest in music and is a dedicated fan of heavy metal.
